

We assign ip addresses to devices statically by assigning the address and its mask and then default gateway address for any device. Ping is a command that sends packets to a device with a particular ip address to see if the device can connect to that device.

